DOCUMENTS PRESENTED AT EICHMANN TRIAL SHOW HIS SINISTER PART IN LONG-PLANNED TERROR METHODS, SUB-HUMAN TREATMENT OF JEWS

After relating his painful experiences with brutal SS men under Eichmann, a witness, Max Burger, was asked whether he could identify the accused Eichmann. He looked over at Eichmann, seated in a glass-enclosed prisoners' dock, and said: "He's the same man," says the New York Herald Tribune. Mr. Burger described how the group of deportees, who included persons of all ages, went more than two days without food and water on the crowded train from Prague. He was the first witness to place Adolf Eichmann at the actual scene of a deportation of Jews who testified at the trial of Eichmann by an Israeli court in Jerusalem.

The witness, a ruddy-faced, white-haired man who looked like a typical, prosperous business man anywhere, identified Eichmann as the SS (Nazi Elite Guard) officer who was waiting in the little railroad yard of Nisko, in the Lublin district of Poland, one day in 1939, when a thousand Czechoslovakian Jews were brutally unloaded from a deportation train. They were ordered by Eichmann to build a camp there from scratch.

Mr. Burger testified that he was living at Moravska-Ostrava, in Czechoslovakia in September, 1939, when World War II broke out and Nazi excesses against the Jews began to get severe. Soon afterwards, he said, he heard that Eichmann had come to Czechoslovakia from Vienna to hasten evacuation of Jews, and one day an order came for a draft of 1,000 Jews between the ages of eighteen and seventy who were to prepare for "mobilization." He said he was included in this draft.

The Jews began assembling in a Nazi riding school on the appointed day, he said, and all that day were processed and finally loaded on a train which did not begin to move until about noon of the following day, says the New York Herald Tribune. They were told they were to be taken to a new homeland.

The train, which was sealed, traveled to Cracow, Poland, on the two-day journey. No water or food was provided for the 1,000 persons on the train, and when people in the station at Cracow came with water they were chased away by SS guards and beaten.

At noon on the second day of the train ride, the deportees reached a station in Poland, Nisko, on the River San, in the district of Lubin. There they were ordered off the train by SS officers and one of them, the witness said, made a speech to the thirsting and starving assemblage.

The SS officer was later identified by the witness as Adolf Eichmann.

"He told us that seven or eight kilometers (four or five miles) across the river the Fuehrer of the Jews had promised us a new homeland," Mr. Burger testified. "He said there were no apartments or houses there but if we would build our own homes we would have roofs over our heads. He said that there was no water there, that the wells were filled with cholera, dysentery and typhus, but if we dig for water we will have water."

The witness said: "This speech was made by Adolf Eichmann who was the man who waited for us at the railroad station."

The witness then went on to describe the painful, step-by-step efforts of the Jews to get roofs over their heads. Some of the men collapsed while trying to get their luggage up the hill where the new camp site was to be. None had had water, says the New York Herald Tribune. Finally, he said horse-drawn carts with building materials were unloaded and the horses were taken from the carts and Jews were harnessed between the shafts, and they got the luggage up in that fashion.

There was nothing on the site but a few miserable huts, according to Mr. Burger, but the guards forced the Jews first to build a hut for the guards. Then they were allowed to build a big hut for their own group.

Meanwhile, the witness said, some of the Jews had obtained water from a near-by place and boiled it in primitive fashion. He added: "Toward evening Eichmann appeared on the plateau to look things over."

It turned out, according to Mr. Burger, that the camp was being set up in an area over which Odilo Globocnik was Gauleiter (Nazi district leader). He was reported to have been "amazed" that Jews had been brought there, since it was his aim to clean Jews out of his territory.

Other transports of Jews came to the camp in succeeding months, during which winter temperatures went far below freezing, and stables and other buildings were put up.

Then, in 1940, a decision was made to abandon the camp and those who remained of the original 1,000 Jews were sent to camps in Czechoslovakia. Most of the missing 700 apparently escaped to the Soviet Union, the witness said, and were sent to Siberia.

After he told of his imprisonment at the Auschwitz concentration camp with his wife in 1944, Mr. Burger was asked by the prosecutor: "Do you see the accused before you? Can you identify him?"

The witness gestured toward Eichmann and said: "He was younger, and in uniform and he didn't wear glasses, but he is the same man," says the New York Herald Tribune. Eichmann looked at Mr. Burger with his usual imperturbability.

The name of Joseph P. Kennedy, a former American Ambassador to Britain, and father of U.S. President Kennedy, was brought into the trial through the reading of a cable which he sent from London to the U.S. Department of State in 1938 telling of harsh things about Jews which Nazi Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop was reported to have said.

The prosecution did not make it clear as to [illegible] how the document was related to Eichmann, but when Israel Attorney General Gideon Hausner was asked about it by the New York Herald Tribune after the court session he said: "Here was an Ambassador of the United States in a European capital notifying his government that a state, Germany, was putting anti-Semitism into a state function." Mr. Hausner added: "Besides, the Ambassador is the father of the present American president."

The Kennedy cable said in part:

"During the day, we had a telephone call from Berenger's office in Paris. We were told that the matter of refugees had been raised by Bonnet in his conversation with von Ribbentrop. The result was very bad.

"Ribbentrop, when pressed, had said to Bonnet that the Jews in Germany, without exception, were pickpockets, murderers, and thieves. The property they possessed had been acquired illegally. The German government had therefore decided to assimilate them with the criminal element of the population.

"The property which they had acquired illegally would be taken from them. They would be forced to live in districts 'frequented by the criminal classes.' They would be under police observation, like other criminals. They would be forced to report to the police as other criminals were obliged to do.

"The German government could not help it if some of these criminals escaped to other countries, which seemed so anxious to have them. It was not, however, willing for them to take the property which had resulted from their illegal operations with them. There was in fact nothing that it could or would do."

Other documents dealt with administrative orders concerning the harassing and plundering of the Jews being forced to emigrate and of details of the accelerated emigration program, says the New York Herald Tribune.

And there were in these documents chilling voices from out of the past, such as Hitler's in a transcript of a speech made by him in 1939 in which he said:

"It was the Jewish people who were the first to deride and mock at my words when I said that I would be the leader of this people and at the head of the government of the Reich. And then I promised to bring a solution to the Jewish problem. This I believe — that Jewry choked with laughter at that time.

"Now I am a prophet once again. If this international organization of rich people will drag the world into a world war again, the result will not be the Bolshevizing of the whole world but it will still be the destruction, the annihilation of the Jewish race in Europe."

Letters written by Eichmann to associates which showed him to have been in 1938 very busy in the Jewish emigration program were among the documents read into the record.

Documents also were presented to show that the anti-Jewish pillaging and arrest round-ups that began on the "crystal night" in Germany in November, 1938, after the assassination by a Jew of a German Embassy official at Paris, actually had been planned in advance.

A frail old man took the witness stand at the trial of Adolf Eichmann and described the terror of the first Nazi deportation of Jews from Germany in 1938, says the New York Times.

He was Zindel Schmuel Grynszpan, whose son Herschel, unbalanced by news of the deportation, assassinated a minor German Embassy official in Paris.

That killing touched off a fresh wave of persecution of German

Son-in-Law of Former U.S. Cabinet Member Gets High Post

Robert M. Morgenthau, of the Bronx, N. Y., has been selected as United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York, generally considered to be the most important Federal district attorney's job in the U.S., says the New York Times. There were political protests over reports earlier this month that William S. Gaud Jr., a New York lawyer whose home is in Greenwich, Conn., would be named, says the New York Times. New York Democratic leaders were incensed at the prospect of having a Connecticut resident in the post.

Mr. Morgenthau combines a good reputation among lawyers with political acceptability. A son of Henry Morgenthau Jr., former Secretary of the Treasury, he is 41 years old and a graduate of Amherst College and Yale Law School. He is a member of the New York firm of Patterson, Belknap & Webb.

In the 1960 campaign Mr. Morgenthau was chairman of Citizens for Kennedy in the Bronx. He is a member of the Van Cortlandt Democratic Club, which is loyal to the regular Bronx organization headed by Representative Charles

A. J. C. Expert Sees Sharp Need For Social Science Research Into Bigotry, Hostility

The executive head of the American Jewish Committee said there was an "imperative need" of long-range social science research for "immunizing Americans against the infectious spread of bigotry and group hostility."

Dr. John Slawson, vice-president of the Committee, said outbursts of bigotry and tensions in the U.S. "though they require prudent special attention to contain them," were usually "sporadic and short-lived."

Dr. Slawson spoke at the Roosevelt Hotel, in New York at the agency's annual executive meeting, says the New York Times. He said a "basic concern" was to reduce "the receptivity to all kinds of demagogery in the United States."

Dr. Slawson, an authority on intergroup relations, said that the most challenging problem was "the changing of attitudes and behavior" and that "insight and understanding are most effective in modifying mental patterns." He said the basic criteria for research as a "paramount method of achieving the mind of insight which changes attitudes and actions" were there:

The do-it-yourself criterion. The responsibility for change is placed with those centrally concerned, as in the religious education projects undertaken by major universities and schools of religion.

Built-in action capability as a criterion for research projects. "Clearly we cannot afford to sponsor purely theoretical research which is shelved for any length of time. It must have a capacity for action."

The potential for stimulating new research in related social science fields. Dr. Slawson cited as an example the exhaustive research by his agency and its five-volume "Studies In Prejudice."

At another session, the agency made public a report, based on findings by its European offices, indicating the intensification of anti-Jewish propaganda "on an international scale" by the United Arab Republic and the Arab League, says the New York Times. The report said Judaism and American Jews were among "their favorite targets, in addition to the continuing attacks on Israel and Zionism."

Ralph Friedman, chairman of the agency's foreign affairs committee, issued the report. It said that "for several days the motor-

Son Of Rabbi, Aged 15, Wins Israel Trip With Perfect Answers To 11 Questions On The Bible

No Jewish high school age student in America knows more about the Bible than a thin, tall, dark-haired fifteen-year-old Brooklyn resident, Isaac Gottlieb, a high-ranking junior at Yeshiva University's High School for Boys in Brooklyn, won first prize in the second annual American Bible Contest sponsored by the Jewish Agency for Israel and the Israel Bible Society. Gottlieb, the son of Rabbi and Mrs. Emanuel Gottlieb, 1422 55th Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., won the title "Aluf HaTanach" ("Bible Champion" in Hebrew) and a trip to Israel in a dramatic verbal battle of Biblical knowledge with eleven other finalists from all sections of the U.S.

Seven rounds of intricate, involved, testing questions were posed to the tense finalists in the Advanced Hebrew Division, the highest of three divisions. Seven times Gottlieb answered his questions perfectly. But Zalman Novick, another Brooklynite, also answered perfectly seven times. An extra round would be necessary to decide the grand winner. Both youths would answer the same four questions. Novick left the auditorium while Gottlieb answered. Again perfection. Novick's turn. He missed.

So Gottlieb won and avenged an earlier defeat. For in the Greater New York Regional Finals, Novick had finished ahead of Gottlieb in the written test of ninety-two questions. Fortunately for Gottlieb the first and second place finishers in each of eight districts across the nation were eligible for the final competition.

Yeshiva University High School for Boys in Brooklyn, had two other students in the national finals: Stanley Donenberg, a sophomore, 1729 67th Street; and Moshe Sokolow, a freshman, 1619 54th Street, both of Brooklyn, both in the English Division. Rabbi Abraham Zuroff is principal of the school. Two other Yeshiva University High School students won honorable mention in the Greater New York Regional finals: Tziona Abramson, of the Yeshiva University High School for Girls in Manhattan; and Chaim Steinbach, of the Yeshiva University High School for Boys in Brooklyn. Both were in the Advanced Hebrew Division.

Love of knowledge, study of the Bible, and skill in the Hebrew language all come naturally to young Gottlieb. His father, a 1932 graduate of Yeshiva University High School for Boys in Manhattan, is an instructor in Hebrew at Brooklyn College and also teaches at the Ramaz School, in New York. His mother is a graduate of Hunter College and is now studying for a master's degree in education at Brooklyn College.

Gottlieb credits much of his Biblical knowledge to weekly reading of the Holy Book during Saturday services at Congregation Pirchei Agudas Israel, 18th Avenue and 54th Street, Brooklyn; and to studying under Rabbi Peretz Yogel, his Jewish studies teacher, in high school. His knowledge of Hebrew was acquired as a second language in his home where it is spoken along with English.

The National Bible Contest seeks to promote greater interest in the reading and study of the Bible among Jewish youth in America and to strengthen the role of Bible study in school curricula. Contestants in the national finals, which were held at the Jewish Agency for Israel, 515 Park Avenue, New York, came from all parts of the U.S. Contest officials estimate that well over 200,000 youths between the ages of 12 and 16 were eligible to compete in the contest.

Gottlieb is uncertain about his future career plans. However, he plans to study for the rabbinate and hopes to continue his studies at Yeshiva College and the University's Rabbi Isaac Elchanan Theological Seminary following graduation from high school. He is a member of Arista, plays clarinet in the school band, and writes Hebrew poetry for "Kolenu," school publication. He has a twin sister, Naomi, a junior at Yeshiva University High School for Girls in Brooklyn; a sister, Rivka, ten; and a brother, David, two.

Yeshiva University High School for Boys in Brooklyn is one of four preparatory schools under University supervision. All feature programs of combined general and Jewish studies. The schools are registered by the New York State Board of Regents.

Yeshiva University, America's oldest and largest university under Jewish auspices, comprises 17 schools and divisions located at six teaching centers in New York City. More than 5,000 young men and women are pursuing courses in Jewish studies and liberal arts and sciences, leading to undergraduate, graduate, and professional degrees and diplomas. The University's Main Center is located at Amsterdam Avenue and 186th Street, Manhattan.

10,800 U.S. Youngsters To Be Confirmed At Shavuos Services

Shavuos, the Jewish holiday which commemorates the giving of the Ten Commandments, will be celebrated in synagogues and homes throughout the world, beginning, sundown, May 20. The holiday is observed for two days by Orthodox and Conservative Jews; and for one day by Reform Jews. Originally an agricultural festival, Shavuos, which in Hebrew means Weeks, marked the appearance of the first fruits following the spring planting. The holiday occurs seven weeks after the first day of Passover.

A ceremony of the holiday is the confirmation of young men and women who have completed their elementary religious education. These youngsters participate in services and programs in the Temples which include special prayers, music, recitations, and floral altar offerings. The theme of each confirmation service expresses the confirmands' affirmation of the ideals of Judaism. They ascend the pulpit and are blessed by their rabbi in front of the Holy Ark.

In the 616 member congregations of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations in the United States, Canada and Latin America, 12,300 youngsters will participate in confirmation services this year.

In the Greater Metropolitan area, 2,180 young people will be confirmed in 93 temples affiliated with the New York Federation of Reform Synagogues. The confirmation class of Temple Beth-El, in Great Neck, L. I., has 78; Temple Israel of Lawrence, L. I., 65; Temple Emanu-El, New York City, 94; Jewish Community Center of White Plains, N. Y., 152; Congregation Bnai Jeshurun, in Newark, N. J., 92; Temple Israel, of New Rochelle, N. J., 86.

Oldsters To Learn How To Be Better Leaders

Eighty Jewish older adults from the Greater New York area will learn how to become better leaders among their contemporaries, it was announced by the Senior Citizens Council of the National Jewish Welfare Board, and the School of Social Work, of Yeshiva University. The golden agers will attend sessions as students in a leadership training institute. The 80 students, none younger than 65, and many in their seventies, were chosen by members of the 40 senior citizens clubs sponsored by YM-YWHAs affiliated with JWB.

Classes will be held one day a week for four consecutive weeks. The students will receive certificates at special exercises. The planned curriculum was devised to do four things for them: give them a better knowledge of senior citizens' problems; provide them with a deeper understanding of the role of older adults as leaders; teach them more effective leadership methods; train them to be informed assistants in organizing similar courses in their own clubs. The institute's faculty will include professors from the Yeshiva University School of Social Work and professional leaders of older adult groups in the New York area.

MUSIC TO RELAX BY . . .

We've provided music for just about everything — television, radio, recordings, stage shows. Thank goodness, these events don't come every day of the week, or we would have been hospitalized years ago.

That's why it comes about that we have a pool of musicians, singers, dancers, and even balancing acts who like to get away from the spotlights once in a while and entertain at parties just like the ones you hold.

The entertainers you get when you call us are professionals in every sense of the word. You get the very best at a price that won't permanently worry your bank manager. Why not call us?

WARSAW GHETTO DESTRUCTION WITNESSES SOUGHT BY W.J.C.

Eighteen years after liquidating the Warsaw ghetto, which once housed more than 500,000 Jews, a number of Himmler's top lieutenants are now facing trial in West Germany. Witnesses who can testify against some of the Nazi arch-criminals and liquidators of the ghetto are now being sought by the World Jewish Congress, in New York, for evidence against: Dr. Ludwig Hahn, former Commandant of the Nazi Security Police in Warsaw; former Gauleiter Otto Hantke; Hermann Hoefle, deputy chief of staff of Aktion Reinhardt (the Nazi operation to eliminate Poland's 3,300,000 Jews) who was sent to direct the liquidation of the ghetto; Heinz Auerswald, former commissioner of the "Jewish District of Warsaw;" George Michalsen, former deputy to Odilo Globocnik who headed Aktion Reinhardt; and Heinrich Klaustermeyer. Three of them, Hahn, Klaustermeyer, and Hoefle, have been arrested. Michalsen is under investigation.

Anyone who has personal knowledge of the criminal activities of these men should get in touch with Dr. Nehemiah Robinson, director of the World Jewish Congress Institute of Jewish Affairs, 15 East 84th Street, New York 28, N. Y.

The Battle Against Indifference Demands A Real Return To Faith

BY CANTOR BEZALEL SILBERBERG, SHAAREI ZEDEK SYNAGOGUE, SAINT JOHN, NEW BRUNSWICK

This day and age has fostered a breed of the human race which seems to be very different from what the writer has ever seen. It could be very possible that the ages of chivalry, honesty, and simplicity are relics of the past, but this remains to be seen. Among Judaic circles, one is given to wondering whether the people have been stricken with this same disease, with the next question being posed as to whether it can be rooted out in the same manner as a surgeon excises something threatening the life of his patient, and whether it can be rooted out permanently. The disease involving Judaic circles today is that of indifference, indifference to religion, indifference to need, and a gross indifference to conscience.

The writer has been perplexed by the actions of the people, and has sought ways and means of his own for eradicating this trait, which seems to have been brought on by the total evolution of the world of humanity in what seemed to be the emancipation of the soul. Although the writer is sure this situation is by no means new to the clergy wherever they may be located, there must be some solution to the problem. Certainly, reasons the writer, the clergy is not wholly to blame, for they've done about everything to combat the attitude of indifference on the part of their congregants. They've even gone to great lengths to sit at conventions and map out means for combatting this dilemma, yet on the surface, nothing new seems to have evolved in favor of the clergy or the people, and most certainly, not in favor of Judaism as a religious entity.

Ideologies and ideologists have successfully confused the people, resulting in their loss as real synagogue attendants or participants. Mass movements to other locations have also contributed to indifference. Attractions have fallen far short of the mark and become stereotyped, and finally, have taken the same direction as other interests. Even the attitude toward God has supposedly become take-it-or-leave-it, with the result that God now occupies a kind of second place.

Indeed, this situation cannot be denied, and prompt action is necessary. Children reflect the same attitude as their parents, making it doubly hard to retrieve them from the clutches of nothingness. Values are so distorted that clergymen are at a loss as to what may be done to stop the disintegration of civilization, which is the root of the entire problem and for which many human factors are to blame.

By chivalry, the writer means that the quality of respect has been roughly cast aside by the human race. God is relegated to the occupation of second place where His relation to the human race is concerned. The Bible is slowly being relegated to the status of a curiosity, and the clergy, for the sake of world conformity, is being reduced to acting like the rest of the herd. Instead of taking to heart those lessons the Bible teaches, the people ignore them with the feeling that they've been enlightened and need no book to show them the way of life.

Instead of making an effort to think things over and do everything to revive Judaic life around the spiritual center, the people have become decentralized. What suffices is a few necessary burdens such as Bar-and-Bat-Mitzvah, Brith, a wedding, funeral, or unveiling. Rarely does anything like a worship service enter the mind of the people. The Sabbath, except for the few who the rest of humanity consider old-fashioned and sentimental, has become as any other day.

By honesty, the writer feels that when the people do enter their houses of worship, they do so because they are inured to conforming with the rest of humanity. They fear being original because originality is a trait which is likewise considered old-fashioned. The mental capacity of the human being of the present doesn't call for him to possess his own mind because it is constantly being subjected to attack, thereby causing inhibition as well as indecision. Psychiatry, advertising, and the other innovations of the present have seen to that.

Lastly, simplicity means that the people aren't wont to face up to the fact that they've strayed a lot further from religion than they dared, that the forces of the psychiatry and advertising fields somehow encouraged them, to the point of their finding themselves developed as a type of society that is simple-minded to the extent that they don't know how to turn and who to turn to. They've accepted the moral values which are hurled at them from every mundane corner, and have been gullible enough to believe these values as representing the truth. The aim toward simplicity has been confusing, in that the forces have entangled the people in a greater morass than ever, with the way out now being obscured.

At one time, religion had the complete answer. It opened a door for the individual seeking the opening with truth, and finding it with truth. God was loved and trusted. The Bible was real, in that it preached the life of simplicity. It stated something and meant what it stated. But forces, seeking to govern the mental powers of the individual and channel it into the narrow pen of herdism, went about that process by disclaiming these preachments, providing heresies that complicated life, rather than simplified it. Hence, the result became herdism, which is the trait of the human being we know today.

It is indeed sad that the total perspective toward religion has been lost. Even love is a complicated process, wherein concessions and compromises are the rule rather than the exception. All God asks of each of us is that we do rightly, one toward the other, perform our tasks with real heart so that our goal might raise us again to a station slightly lower than the angels. We cannot even claim our rightful station in the world of today because of the destruction of our human qualities.

The writer feels the presence of such scientific entities as the atom bomb and rocket as having been revealed to us for a purpose which was to warn us to affect a return to what was formerly the good and simple life. We loved, we toiled, and we trusted, all in the name of God. We have lost these abilities because we have profaned God's name through the stagnating help of forces who feel they are enlightened enough to replace God with other symbolisms, all of which are meaningless. We live in a void, and those not as yet ensnared in the pen of modern narrowness and herdism look on with alarm and disgust.

Most of the human race has broken the second commandment, which exhorts the dictum that nothing may be put in the way of God, yet there have been people who have been turned toward another direction, causing their outlook to become quite dreary and dull. The writer doesn't wish to enshroud society with gloom, but there is no other outlook. By the same token, there is no possible way the people are able to turn back because their path is constantly being strewn with words of indecision and doubt, thereby effecting the dilemma of their indifference.

Psychiatry is good where its own field is concerned. It should be allowed a limit for its operations, then kept within that limit. The field of advertising needs a great deal of overhauling, if the world of the human is to become stabilized once again. The human must be given the opportunity to use his mind, so as to re-evaluate himself on where he fits precisely in the human pattern and finally, religion must be re-infused, in massive doses, if the world of humanity is to survive and succeed to its station of being slightly below the angels.

The values of the Bible and religion have never been of more need to us than now. We stand to lose everything, besides our minds, if we do not make an effort to effect a real return to faith and its qualities of chivalry, honesty, and simplicity. Our battle is for us to rouse ourselves from the lethargy of indifference with vigorous and even zealous help from the clergy, and return to those ways which come from God and which are ours to enjoy as His creatures, and not as the creatures of men, trying to usurp God's role in the universe.

A. Buckley. Mr. Buckley had not suggested Mr. Morgenthau for the job. But he said that the choice would be "entirely satisfactory" to him, and later he gave an active endorsement.

The Attorney General, Robert F. Kennedy, who recommends United States attorneys to the President, has been the target of the political heat over the Southern District choice. Various New York Democratic leaders and Congressmen complained to him about the possible appointment of Mr. Gaud.

The Attorney General, however, issued a statement saying the post in the Southern District was "not a patronage matter." He said it was too important legally to be treated as such, and he added he had made that clear to political leaders.

The Southern District covers Manhattan, the Bronx, Westchester, and eight upstate New York counties, says the New York Times. The Federal District Court there has far more business than any other in the country. The United States Attorney's post pays $20,000 a year.

DOCUMENTS PRESENTED AT EICHMANN TRIAL SHOW HIS SINISTER PART IN LONG-PLANNED TERROR METHODS

Jews, including the infamous Kristallnacht — the night of Nov. 9, 1938, when Nazi mobs broke the windows of Jewish shops, sacked synagogues and beat up Jews throughout Germany and Austria.

Eichmann, on trial for having sent millions of Jews to Nazi death camps in World War II, is cited in the indictment for having helped to organize the Kristallnacht pogrom.

The courtroom crowd stared with grim fascination as Mr. Grynszpan recalled the days of November, 1938, when Germany suddenly tried to transfer 60,000 non-German Jews into Poland. Mr. Grynszpan, who is 75 years old and about five feet tall, looked almost elfin as he peered over his glasses at the Israeli judges on this dais high above him.

The judges are Moshe Landau, member of the Supreme Court of Israel; Benyamin Halevi, president of the Jerusalem District Court and Yitzhak Raven, president of the Tel Aviv District Court.

Not once did Mr. Grynszpan look across the room to the bulletproof glass cage where Eichmann sat. The former Nazi looked bored and made an occasional note on his writing pad. Eichmann alone may know what happened to Mr. Grynszpan's son, Herschel, whom the Nazis seized from a French jail after the fall of France.

Eichmann, during the police interrogation after he was spirited from Argentina to Israel, said young Grynszpan, "a mere slip of a boy," was brought to his Berlin office for questioning in 1942, says the New York Times. But Eichmann insisted that he had sent the boy away and that he never knew what happened to him. Herschel is assumed to have died in a concentration camp.

Mr. Grynszpan's wispy gray beard trembled as he spoke rapidly in Yiddish in an agitated tone of voice. He said he had been living in Germany twenty-eight years when the police visited his home in Hanover on the night of Oct. 27, 1938.

"We didn't know anything," he said. "That day, it was Thursday evening, a policeman came and told us to go to (police) Zone 11 with our passports. He said 'You'll be right back. Don't take anything with you.'" Mr. Grynszpan went to Deportation Zone 11 with his wife, daughter and elder son; Mordecai. Herschel was studying in Paris.

"When I reached Zone 11 I saw all sorts of people sitting, standing, weeping," he said. "A police officer was shouting: 'Sign! Sign!' and forcing deportation paper on them."

"What did you do?" Yaakov Baror, Deputy State Attorney, asked.

"I had to sign, like all of them," Mr. Grynszpan said. "One of us did not, and his name, I believe, was Gershon Silber. He had to stand in the corner for twenty-four hours. They took us to a concert hall. There we found people from all over — about 600 of them. They took us in police vehicles, prison vans. They brought us to a railway station. The streets were black with people shouting, 'send them to Palestine!'"

On the Polish border, Mr. Grynszpan said, cars crowded with Jews from Hanover were loaded with others taken from other German cities — Cologne, Hamburg, Duesseldorf, Bremen, Leipsig — until they numbered about 12,000, says the New York Times. "At the border they searched us for money," Mr. Grynszpan said. "If anyone had more than 10 marks, the rest of the money was taken away. They told us — 'ten marks, you did not bring more to Germany so you cannot take more out.'" Mr. Grynszpan's voice became more agitated and he lashed out with his thin left arm.

"The S.S. (elite guard) men used whips to hurry us across fields to the frontier line. Those who faltered were struck, blood spurted, bundles were grabbed from peoples' hands. It was the first time I had seen the barbaric behavior of Germans. They told us to run and not stop. I was struck and fell into a ditch. My son helped me up and cried, 'Run, Papa! Otherwise we shall die.'"

Then, Mr. Grynszpan said, they ran across the Polish border, the women first, so that the nervous Polish frontier guards would be less likely to open fire. The Polish regime was less than enthusiastic about receiving thousands of Jews, even though the Jews waved Polish passports. A Polish general finally arrived, Mr. Grynszpan testified, and decided to admit them.

"They took us to a village of about 6,000 and we were 12,000", he said. "Rain was falling hard. There was no bread. People were fainting—some suffered heart attacks and on all sides one saw old men and old woman. Our suffering was great."

Mr. Grynszpan was a surprise witness. He was called down from the balcony by Israel's Attorney General, Gideon Hausner.
